Volume 22 | October–December 2011

Another season of winter joy soon approaches the Paper Garden.

I love this time of year because my son Miles can't wait for Christmas and it's so cute the way he really starts to behave for Santa Claus and circles everything in the newspaper ads that are toys for his wish list. This inspires me to start thinking of our annual holiday picture card, handmade trimmings like boxes, gift tags, and of course stationery! You will see lots of fun classes this year to help you with your handmade holiday. Will it be cards and tags decorated with snowflakes, santa, reindeers, pine trees or a simple ornament for your card... or are you like me... the gotta have it all look... a little bit of this and a little bit of that—that's ok. Come by and see all of our samples and we'll let you decide!

Before you check out our list of classes, be sure to sign up for our guest designer Cindi Nelson's classes in October! Cindi owns and runs Savvy Stamps from Seattle Washington. We carry the entire line of Savvy stamps and love them all! And on this year's front cover of our newsletter is our windows and display designer, among other things, the lovely and talented Laurie Hosoume and her son Brent who will be the first child in our little boutique to start high school! Good luck Brent! Let the winter celebrations begin!
